

WHY THIS DELAY?

Over a week ago the APPEAL called the Grand Jury's attention to the many violations of law in the Davis rape case, by which the compounding of felonies and assisting a criminal to escape justice became the regular business of some of our leading citizens.

It is known to every man, woman and child in Carson that money and political influence was used, newspapers muzzled and men "pulled down" to prevent the case ever being tried.

Now the serious charge is made on the street and by leading citizens that the District Attorney was, prior to accepting his office, the retained attorney for the defendant in the case and that in dismissing the case he was acting as the engaged counsel of the accused and his friends.

The APPEAL, when the appointment was made was strongly in favor of Mr. Summerfield, whom it regarded as a man of enterprise, fearlessness, ability and integrity. We are therefore unwilling to believe these charges on mere side-walk report. It would require considerable proof to convince us that Mr. Summerfield would, in almost his first official act, in so important a case, allow himself to receive fees from both sides of the case, the county and the defendant.

At the same time the charge is made so persistently and is so generally believed that it is incumbent upon Mr. Summerfield to deny it over his signature and set the matter at rest. He claims to have made an error in dismissing the case by reason of not seeing one of the witnesses, the name of the most important one.

The APPEAL is willing to give him the benefit of his explanation. If his explanation is correct he can now retrieve his mistake by bringing to justice all parties concerned in compounding the Davis felony and assisting a fugitive from justice to escape.

If he does not move at once in the matter, it is the duty of the Grand Jury to meet and begin the investigation.

A few days ago two of the conspirators in the case were talking, and one was heard to say:

"If the APPEAL would shut up we'd be all right."

If the APPEAL, the law and the Grand Jury were all abolished, gilt-edged criminals in Carson would have an easy time of it.

A Tribute to Gally.

Judge Goodwin, in a splendid obituary of Dr. Gally, one of Nevada's foremost writers, closes as follows:

He was at home everywhere; he could run a funeral all by himself; he could talk learnedly with the men of the sciences; he knew all about the Government of the United States from its foundation, and when the small politician ran against him and heard him talk for two hours he went away with a liberal education. And then in a company of rough men, while he never told a profane or obscene story, no one talked but him.

And so he went joyously down the trail of his life, until suddenly, without much warning, his wife died, and then his heart broke. Writing about it he said: "To me there never was but one woman in the world, and she is gone. Some duties remain for me to perform, and a brave man has nothing to do but his duty, but the wine has gone out of my life, and what I used to look upon with dread, will come to me a messenger as welcome, as ever after a hard day's toil, his brother, Sleep, was welcome."

And now that brother of Sleep has come, and that great, tender-hearted giant has passed away, and it is a sacred pleasure to wave to him across the divide, all hails and farewells.

There is talk of printing Farmer Sweeney's great irrigation speech before the Convention, in pamphlet form.
